

Dear FCC,

I have been reading about a proposal to expand the Low Power FM (LPFM) service in a manner to take priority over current FM translator service. In my opinion, K-LOVE, one of the most influential national radio broadcasts will be affected by this decision and I firmly oppose infringing on the current operations of these radio translators.

K-LOVE broadcasts music which is uplifting, hopeful and not some of the coarse language and raw subject material I hear in broadcasts from other FM stations-- some of which have been the source of complaints to the FCC. I believe KLOVE serves the local community by broadcasting its format of music in a way which is cost-effective. It also serves as a forum to distribute information on local non-profit events.

I believe displacing translators like K-LOVE will serve a great dis-service to the community and to the nation, as it will no longer be able to operate efficiently and effectively. Besides the reasons I provided above, I believe this radio best-serves the public interest by providing a format that encourages and uplifts its listeners.

Please protect the translators of K-LOVE from being replaced by LPFM. I welcome any additional correspondence on this issue.

Regards,

Ken Fitzpatrick
